

PURPOSE & OBJECTIVES:

Purpose: Provide participants with an overview of non-pharmaceutical interventions and alternatives when working with challenging behaviors of children and adolescents of all ages and developmental stages. At the conclusion of the program, each participant should be able to:

1. Define “experiential avoidance” & its disadvantages
2. Understand the difference between “looking from thoughts/feelings/urges” to “looking at them”
3. Describe therapeutic activities based on a metaphor
4. Describe the strategies of “defusion”.
5. Describe a “Matrix” activity & its promote service to a person’s value
6. Name the elements of “self-compassion” & “shame resiliency”
7. Name ways to modify treatment approach for individuals with intellectual disabilities

SPEAKER:

Susan Smith, is an employee of the Woodward Resource Center where she has provided behavioral technology within an interdisciplinary team; provided group and individual counseling to individuals who live there; and serves as Chairperson of the Autism Team, past Director of the I-PART program and current Director of the I-TABS program. She is an Iowa licensed mental health counselor (LMHC), a Master’s Level board certified behavior analyst (BCBA), has attended Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT) Boot Camp and received intensive training from Behavioral Tech, Inc. in Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT).
